The Rector Writes

The ongoing conflict in Ukraine, an uneasy ceasefire in Gaza (where Israel still carries out bombing raids but claim they are not breaching that ceasefire as well as raids on Lebanon, the West Bank and Syria!), civil war in Sudan as well as many other current conflicts, prove that our world is a broken and divided place. It is fuelled by the growing trend of defining 'us' as against 'others' – a populist trend that is gaining traction, especially in Far-Right politics.

This month, on Sunday 9th November, we will be holding our annual Service of Remembrance.

This Service commemorates those who made the ultimate sacrifice in the causes of justice, peace and freedom during the two world wars of the twentieth century. The purpose of this Remembrance is not to glorify war or death in any way, but rather to highlight the horrors of war and conflict. It is also to highlight the futility of war in which there are never any winners but all are ultimately losers.

When Jesus was asked by a young lawyer (Luke 10:25), 'What must I do to inherit eternal life?', Jesus, in turn, asked the lawyer what the Scriptures taught. The lawyer replied, 'To love God with all our heart, soul, mind and strength – and to love our neighbour as ourself.' Jesus commended him for his answer. However, the lawyer wanting to justify himself asked, 'Who is my neighbour?' In response, Jesus told the parable of the Good Samaritan. From that parable we learn that our neighbour is everyone (without exception) who might be in need – even if they can be classified as 'other' and not one of 'us'. If we are to live out our Christian beliefs and to follow the teachings of Jesus, we too will need to heed Jesus' final command to the lawyer, 'Go and do likewise'. (Luke 10:37b)

Remembrance Sunday Service Sunday 10th November 10.30am

The Remembrance Sunday Service remembers all the fallen in all wars. Tullow has a particular reason to remember as 17 members/associates of the parish were killed in both world wars, among whom were the three Wilson brothers from Carrickmines House and their cousin Nurse Sophia Barrett who perished in the RMS Leinster. This is always a very moving and memorable Service.

Have You Lost a Loved One?

Join us for an Ecumenical Service of Remembrance

Service of Remembrance Sunday 23rd November 5pm

Have you lost someone whose memory you would like to commemorate? A family member or a friend?

This ecumenical Service is for all in the community who have lost loved ones in recent years. Names of the deceased will be recorded before the start of the Service and candles will be lit in their memory.

This is a moving Service which can be very healing for many people.

Please help us spread the word to family, friends, neighbours and families of former parishioners. All are welcome no matter which church they would normally attend or denomination with which they would identify.

NEWS

Rev John and Vera are Leaving

As most parishioners know by now, John will be retiring at the end of February, and he and Vera will be moving back to Cork. They have been part of the Tullow community for over 18 years, and we will deeply miss them both.

John and Vera have always been wonderfully hands-on in every aspect of parish life (as can be seen in the photo 😊), and their energy and commitment have made a lasting difference. Parish life will certainly be the poorer without them.

A suitable farewell event will be organised in the New Year to thank them for their many years of dedicated service and friendship.

Music in Foxrock with Ailbhe McDonagh and John O'Connor in Tullow Church

Friday 24th October will live long in the memories of the capacity audience at the Foxrock Art Society's concert by John O'Connor and Ailbhe McDonagh. Hearing world class musicians in an intimate setting was a very special experience. We heard not only Beethoven but Ailbhe's own compositions Valencia and Skellig and the encore was the incredibly beautiful Carnival of the Animals by Saint-Saens.

We had two stars performing for us but the third star was the church itself. Thanks to Alan's arrangements of 150 candles, the church looked beautiful and, at the wine reception afterwards, was much commented upon.

The Foxrock Arts Society was formed in 2024 under the auspices of FACE (Foxrock Area Community and Enterprise)

Harvest Thanksgiving Service and Brunch with the Stedfast Band

The Harvest Service is always a special one and this year, like the last three, the Stedfast Band played their selection of popular hymns. The large congregation sang lustily and heard a thoughtful sermon preached by Canon Ricky Rowntree.

As you can see from the photos the church was beautifully and imaginatively decorated by the team under Sandra Ruttle and the brunch afterwards, provided by Vera Tanner and her team, was much appreciated.

The collection in aid of Bray Women's Refuge, Down Syndrome India and the Bishops' Appeal raised €615 so huge thanks to all who contributed both financially and practically to ensure an enjoyable and productive event.

Installation of Accessible Toilet

Work on installing an accessible toilet and re-configuring the existing toilet area started this week. Build time is 6 - 7 weeks and we will have a nice new toilet area when finished. A substantial grant towards the cost has been awarded from the government's Community Centres Investment Fund.

HEART ON MY SLEEVE

ANDREW PORTER

My story of struggle and strength

Two pieces of good news this month

As many will know, Andrew Porter, Ireland's rugby prop, was raised in Tullow parish. His book Heart on My Sleeve was published recently and he also made a much-praised appearance on the Late Late Show. Andrew's connection with Tullow adds an extra dimension when watching matches, as well as the fact that his Dad, Ernie, is a Glebe warden! The book would make an ideal Christmas present.

The second piece of good news is in an article written by author Joseph O'Connor in The Irish Times on 23rd October. The Leslie whose letter he writes about was the uncle of church warden Torren Gale. Leslie's moving letter was first read out by Joseph O'Connor at the Letters for Life event in Tullow last year; Torren also read it on Remembrance Sunday last year.

Joseph O'Connor

An Irishman's Diary

Today, An Post celebrates the centenary of Hugh O'Flaherty's ordination by launching a commemorative stamp in his honour. Fittingly, given the motto of the Kerry priest and anti-Nazi activist – "God has no country" – the stamp is for worldwide post.

Born in 1898, Hugh was raised in Killarney. After ordination, he moved at the age of 28 to the Vatican where he acquired three doctorates. September 1943 to June 1944 saw the Nazi occupation of Rome.

With friends including Irish folk singer Delia Murphy and British ambassador D'Arcy Osborne, he assembled a network of activists that hid thousands of fugitives, including many escaped Allied prisoners of war. He died in 1963 and is buried in Cahersiveen. His amazing story of solidarity lives on.

A keen letter writer, Hugh would be tickled, I think, by the fact that the image of his face has ended up on a stamp. As a modest, scholarly man who spoke rarely about his wartime heroism, he might also have blushed a little.

I was fortunate to read his own surviving letters when researching my novels about him, My Father's House and The Ghosts of Rome. His writing reveals a likable, witty, sometimes tetchy, watchful person with a remarkable gift for friendship.

Kerry is close to his heart; he relishes news from home. On other occasions, he displays sharp insights into the labyrinth of Vatican politics. His letters reveal a strong liking for the classic films of his era, as well as for his beloved sports.

Letters played a part in leading him into activism. Appointed a Vatican visitor to the Fascist prison camps around Italy, he gave writing materials to prisoners, defying the guards.

Stories of Black and Tan atrocities were part of his Kerry inheritance, but he assisted British soldiers among Allied prisoners of war from many nations.

Soon he was smuggling out letters from POWs to loved ones back at home. The neutral Dublin government was unhappy. A Department of External Affairs memo refers to Hugh behaving "like a postman".

But these letters were hugely important in a world without reliable communications. Often, they were the only indication that the sender was alive.

Researching my Escape Line novels in London's Imperial War Museum I read a letter written by a British soldier, one of the thousands who liberated Rome, describing the Sistine

■ Hugh O'Flaherty: a prolific letter writer he is being commemorated with an An Post stamp

Chapel ceremony for the armies of freedom. "We awaited the pope's arrival, but subtly the Yank Press photographers edged near the door. 'Hold that, your Holiness, till I gotcha in focus.' Pius shot from the scene."

Often, wartime letters brought darker tidings. The memoir of Hugh's friend and Escape Line comrade Sam Derry includes a devastating letter from "a

“Seventeen days later, his plane was shot down over Malta and he was killed Scottish boy", addressed to the boy's parents.

"Dear Mother, Father and Family. This is the last letter I will be able to write as I get shot today. I hope this war will be over soon so that you will all have peace forever. Goodbye. Your ever loving soldier, son and brother, Willie."

Another heartbreaking letter was written by Leslie Butler, from Rathmines, who joined the RAF. In May 1941 he wrote to his parents. Seventeen days later, his plane was shot down over Malta and Leslie was killed. He was 25.

Even the briefest extract from his previously unpublished letter is heartbreaking. "My dearest Mammy & Daddy, If and when you read these lines, it will mean that I've passed on, and I feel at this time that I cannot leave this world without expressing my thoughts to you. There is no doubt that when I think of this war rationally, I give up hope for the world. But always at the back of my mind, there is a blind faith in God's power to put things right when the time is right, and it is this feeling that has helped me to carry on. Before the war started, I was as much a pacifist as anyone can be. I had no use for war, as it is a filthy and wrong thing, but once it started, pacifism had lost its point for the time being, and until freedom could be restored to the world again, war had to be waged in its worst form.

"I have been one of the extremely lucky sons in this world, as I have had a wonderful Mother and Father whose love and generosity has always, and ever will be, treasured by me. Your loving son, Leslie."

This year, when I post a letter or a Christmas card with the Hugh O'Flaherty stamp, I'll remember not only the brave man whose portrait appears on it but Leslie Butler's family too and those who gave everything. And the frightened, hungry fugitives who were saved by Hugh's courage, aided by thousands of unknown Roman women and men who risked their lives to help. His life is a reminder that, in a troubled, divided era, we can all do something. Often, more than we think.

Joseph O'Connor's novels My Father's House and The Ghosts of Rome, featuring Hugh O'Flaherty are published by Harvill.

Tullow Book Club

My Name Is Emilia Del Valle by Isabel Allende

Despite the fact that English is not the author's first language, there was nothing lost in translation in this book.

The story is set in the late 1800s in San Francisco and Chile. Emilia was born and reared in San Francisco. Educated by her step father, she was encouraged to write. She started by writing novelettes but had to use a male pen name. She goes on to get a job writing the social columns for the local newspaper but again having to use her male pen name.

It wasn't until the build up of civil war in Chile, that the opportunity came for her to report under her own name. Fluent in Spanish, she made a strong case for being the right person to go to Chile and report on the war. Her mother was more than supportive for her young daughter to go as she saw it as an opportunity for Emilia to find her natural father and claim her inheritance!

Emilia achieved success in her job and finding her father, as well as her extended family.

The author gives a harrowing picture of one-to-one combat, where battles were won or lost in hours, and the huge sacrifices made by all involved. Again, this book picks up the theme of women's rights to equal opportunities.

Next month's book choice is The Life Impossible by Matt Haig.

JUST A THOUGHT

A Prayer for Peace

We are moulded, each one of us,
in the image of God,
and within our souls there is a fingerprint
none can erase.

We pray for those who have no regard for anyone but self,
who put no value on human life.

For nations and individuals who abuse and kill.

We are not called to be judge or jury,
but we are called to be agents of change,
and if the butterfly that flaps its wings
should be our attitude to others
then so be it, Lord,

and may the hurricane this generates somewhere within the world reach into the hearts and souls of those for whom we pray, and reveal to them how precious are those for whom they have no love, and how precious are they who now bring tears to the eyes of God. Amen.

Foxrock is on a Winning Streak!

Foxrock has been in the news recently for the best possible reasons.

Firstly - for the third year running Foxrock won Best District Award in Dún Laoghaire Rathdown Co. Council

Secondly - the village was shortlist in the national Age Friendly awards

Thirdly - and this is seriously exciting - Foxrock won a bronze medal in the National SuperValu Tidy Towns Awards.

All of the above are tributes to the hard work of the FACE Foxrock Tidy Towns volunteers, some of whom are in the parish, who work all year round picking litter and weeds and organising various things to ensure that Foxrock is an attractive place in which to live, do business and visit.

Businesses and residents all play their part and we are all proud of the above successes.

FOLLOWED BY: - THE GOODNESS OF GUINNESS.

By Tony Corcoran

There is no other company, industry, or premises more closely aligned—indeed almost synonymous—with its hometown than Guinness's St. James's Gate Brewery and the city of Dublin. Guinness has had an enormous influence over the city's economic, social, and cultural life. In this warm and fascinating piece of history, Tony Corcoran examines the magnitude of the brewery's operation, and the working lives of the thousands of Dubliners who have depended on Guinness for their livelihood, either directly or indirectly. The company's unusually progressive treatment of its workers—health care, training, and housing—is revealed in detail, as is the Guinness family's philanthropy and compassion towards the less well-off residents of the city. Tracing Guinness's progressive attitudes to their roots, Corcoran also explores the important roles of the strong-willed women in each generation of the Guinness dynasty. A labor of love, full of anecdotes, humour, and historical insights into one of Dublin's most important and best-loved institutions. Tony is the third generation of his family since 1891 to have worked in the brewery.

Carriglea Park is located in Kill O The Grange in south County Dublin, at the junction of Kill Avenue and Rochestown Avenue. The Rev Thomas Goff, lived at Carriglea Park in the late 18th and early 19th century, he was a very wealthy and powerful man who could do and say what he liked – a Church of Ireland minister, land owner and sometimes army chaplain. While living at Carriglea House, Rev Thomas planted an orchard behind the house which is still there today. After his death the house was certified as an industrial school in 1894, after it was acquired by the Christian Brothers, and started operating in 1896. It was operated as a residential training school for boys. The site was given to the Department of Education in 1982 and is now the location of the Dún Laoghaire Institute of Art, Design and Technology, a third-level institute of technology with over 2000 students.

Don't forget that the right to burial in our peaceful Remembrance Garden is available to parishioners for €1,500 and a limited number of spaces for non-parishioners are available at €2,500. Please consider telling your friends and family about this oasis of peace. Contact the Rector if you're interested.
